Matt Carmichael had always been a disappointment. To his father at least. Matt's refusal to hunt was just one of the excuses he used to abuse his family to the point of destruction. Twenty years later, Matt is reunited with his father and brother for a holiday of a life time. He knew something was wrong. He knew he shouldn't trust his father, but it had been twenty years, and people could change. Matt was wrong. Trapped in a land that time forgot, Matt is pulled back into the world he fought to escape, and is forced to do the two things he had always refused. In order to survive, Matt must both forgive his family, and join the hunt. As they journey deeper into the lost world, Matt learns the hideous truth about his father. The family's darkest secrets are brought to light. In a land of ancient beasts, man still remains the greatest predator of them all.
